According to Openstreetmaps, the perimeter you propose is about 2.36 miles long, or 12460 feet.

Conservative estimate: ~5.85 feet per person (average man, arms fully outstretched.): 2130 people can form such a perimeter.

Liberal estimate: ~1.5 feet per person (average man, shoulder to shoulder): 8307 can form such a perimeter.

Even if attendance is ass (which it certainly won't be) this is absolutely possible.

Because the joint session is ran by the President of the Senate, who is also VPOTUS, which happens to be Mike Pence. During that session, Bitch McConnell and Witch Pelosi have exactly as much power as any other member of their chamber. Who's to say Pence doesn't tell them that they must be there in person?

3 I'm not opposed to it. Everyone that can't go to DC should show up to the homes of their officials and get LOUD. Follow your states laws and bring your fishing rods out if you can.

On that note: I'm kinda worried about DC, bringing your fishing rods seems like it'll be an issue for a lot of people and I really don't want to be there without mine or leave it in a hotel room or AirBnB.

12 ▼ Use CB instead of ham. Vastly more accessible

permalink parent save report block reply

▲ Tunk 2 months ago +15 / -0

15 ▼ It is, but you dont want 100+ newbie cb owners flooding channels at a large event.

It pretty much jams cb radio in the vicinity of the event unless someone pulls out a vehicle setup with a lot more power to tell everyone to stfu.

Youd need a cb club or something to organize around instead.

For example my cb club back in NZ ran coms for motorcycle/car rallies, local events in the town, etc. Any club with events experience will be able to set up marshals for you and keep shit together.

permalink parent save report block reply

▲ Feddy 2 months ago +3 / -0

3 ▼ Thank you for this input!

Maybe limited, spread out radio communications hubs could be set up?

permalink parent save report block reply

▲ Tunk 2 months ago +2 / -0

2 ▼ Yeah pretty much that's how we organised it,

Set up check points at racing events (field marshals who could call in incidents, checking who passed the point in case of lost/cheating racers, call in car/bike numbers at set intervals etc), or for public events several marshal points with wondering monitors, everyone using hand held CB sets with a spare battery pack.

Base station was either a RV setup with a erected antenna or a tent setup with generator.

The base station had enough power to key over anyone being a cunt in the area, and to pick up any other operators to let them know we would like the channels clear and temporarily jump to another channel for the day.

Usually we had locally defined event channels everyone knew about, but sometimes folks forgot/new operators.

A big disadvantage of CB radio is that its ridiculously easy to jam up unless everyone takes etiquette into account, or in the case of malicious actors they just jam it with a dead key or send music/chatter over the air.

Also a not so nice way to have local clubs/operators/truckers turn up on your doorstep for a friendly introduction, or possibly FCC/authorities.

Note that channel 9 is generally used as an emergency channel and usually monitored by police or a dispatcher, so throwing a bunch of new operators on CB at a event can also disrupt anyone using channel 9 to report a emergency.

Also try and "occupy" one or more of those buildings with the express mission of gaining access to the tunnels.

Edit: should have emphasized, also do the perimeter thing, but as a backup strategy.

▼ permalink save report block reply

5 Maximum intimidation means we should group together, and build out. Lines that are 1 person deep are easy targets for Pantifa, and various flags and items that we might have to celebrate with are much more difficult to keep secure. Masses of roaring pedes will devour Pantifa. Senators will pee their pants. If they can't see us they won't care.

permalink save report block reply

▲ MyDogCompletesMe 2 months ago +7 / -0

7 Another idea would be to mass up until we reach a big enough level and then roll out a portion to ring the streets as in the map. The key is we wait until there are enough folks before thinning our lines. ✓

It would be like a power move if the crowd partially dispersed to surround the buildings. Note that the best would be to first encircle where the Senators are, then if we still have enough ranks, to then build out you want them thinking that there is absolutely nothing anyone could do if that crowd got angry. We should not give that up.
